Introduction

Comrades of the Grand Army of the Republic:—

More than a quarter of a century has passed since the first shot was fired on Sumter. The report of that shot thrilled the nation. Ten millions of people were startled as never before.

A call for volunteers to defend the Stars and Stripes was made. You responded, leaving farm and workshop, office and store, home and loved ones, to protect and defend the nation's honor.

Battles were lost and won. Comrades who, at morn, answered "Here," at eventide could never more respond. Long and weary marches, battles fierce and bloody, marked the years from 1861 to 1865.

After the most gallant fight the world ever beheld—scores of battles, any one of which would have closed the strife in any European war with the grandest record in history—you turned your faces homeward.

Your valor and courage, your common sacrifice for country, home and God, cemented you as comrades in indissoluble bonds of "Fraternity," "Charity," and "Loyalty."

The Grand Army of the Republic was instituted to perpetuate the remembrance of sacrifices for your country and the honor of the nation.

At these annual Encampments you have gathered for thirty-six years, and recounted anecdotes, incidents and events of the war. The thirty-seventh annual gathering is at hand, and you will again grasp the friendly hand of comrades whom you have not met since, perchance, on picket duty, long ago, and drop a tear in memory of many noble comrades whose forms lie mouldering beneath a Southern sky.

This meeting will be especially pleasant to Western comrades, being right in our midst, and doubtless the largest of its kind the world has ever seen or will see.

This book furnishes splendid portraits of our two great chiefs, President Roosevelt and Thos. J. Stewart, Commander-in-Chief of the Grand Army of the Republic, a complete and official record of the engagements from 1861 to 1865. It is dedicated to you, with the hope that you will find it worthy of a place in your library, to be handed down to your children with the name and date of the engagements in which you participated underscored with indelible ink.

Presented with the compliments of the

The Grand Army

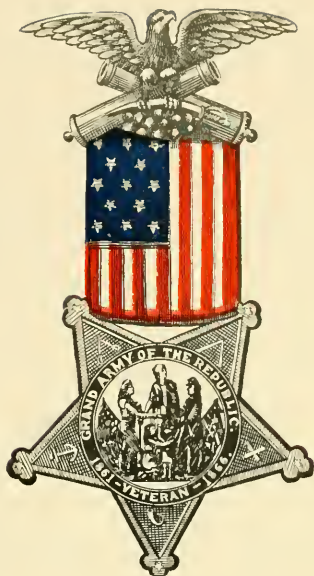

The men to whom this magnificent order owes its origin are Dr. B. F. Stephenson and Rev. W. G. Rutledge. The former served as surgeon of the 14th Illinois from 1861 to 1864, and the latter as chaplain, and was his tent-mate. In 1864 they discussed the idea of an order to be composed entirely of soldiers of the Union Army, to preserve the friendship of comrades and provide for mutual aid.

These two gentlemen met at Springfield in March, 1866, and prepared the ritual of the proposed order. After a long discussion they selected the name "Grand Army of the Republic" as fitting and expressive. It was decided to print the ritual, and Capt. J. S. Phelps, at the suggestion of Gov. Oglesby, went from Springfield to Decatur and supervised the work. He talked with a number of old comrades about the proposed organization, with the result that they made formal application to Mr. Stephenson for a charter to form a post. The charter was granted on April 6, 1866, and the first post of the now mighty organization began work at Decatur with twelve charter members.

As it is always the case with new organizations, no matter how meritorious they may be, its early years were marked by slow progress, owing to misapprehension of its character and possible distrust of its results. As was natural, its object was misunderstood, especially by the Democrats and it had to labor for years before the fact was finally recognized that it is not a purely political organization, but a benevolent and social one, patriotic to the core.

Everybody now understands it to be a grand benevolent order, which preserves the spirit of comradeship begun in the army and cemented on many a hard-fought field and weary march, which cares for the sick and disabled, which buries the soldier dead and ministers to their widows and orphans. It has done a most benevolent work during its quarter of a century of existence, and has spent in its grand work of charity millions of dollars. Its growth within the past few years has been marvelous. It has probably, however, reached its full prosperity as to membership, because death is beginning to be very busy among those who upheld the cause of national unity during the days of the rebellion, and the ranks will be thinned each year because of the members who have answered the final roll-call and gone to sleep, as Whittier says, in "The low green tents

Whose curtains never outward swing."

Sons of Veterans

This eminently loyal and patriotic organization was born of a desire, like the G. A. R., to keep alive the principles of "fraternity, charity and loyalty." Sad but true is it that one by one the membership of the "Grand Army" is passing away. But when the need requires, the sons of these veterans will stand ready to "present arms" and take the place of their fathers in Memorial Day exercises and otherwise, if necessary (but God forbid!) to rise at their country's call. The first "Camp" was mustered at Pittsburg, Pa., Nov. 12, 1881. There are now two thousand camps, with a combined membership of over one hundred thousand. Its membership is confined to the lineal descendants, over 18 years of age, of honorably discharged soldiers, sailors or marines who served in the late Civil War.

Battles of Ancient Times

THE battles of ancient times were fiercer and attended with greater loss of life than those of modern days. At Canae, where Hannibal conquered the Romans, 70,000 fell. The Romans alone in an engagement with the Cimbri and Teutons lost 80,000. The Carthaginians attacked Hymera in Sicily with an army of 300,000 men and a fleet of 2,000 ships and 3,000 transports; not a ship or transport escaped destruction, but a few of the soldiers reached Carthage in small boats with the melancholy tidings. Marcus slew in one battle 140,000 Gauls and in another 290,000. In the battle of Issus, between Alexander and Darius, 110,000 were slain; in that of Arbela 300,000. Julius Caesar once annihilated an army of 363,000 Helvetians; in a battle with the Usipetes, he slew 400,000; and on another occasion he massacred 430,000 Germans who had crossed the Rhine in quest of new settlements. In modern times others fell at Durham in England 15,000 men; at Halidonhill and Agincourt, 20,000 each; at Bantzen and Liepanto, 25,000 each; at Austerlitz, Jena and Lutzen, 30,000 each; at Eylau, 60,000; at Waterloo and Quatre Bras, one engagement, 70,000; at Borodino, 80,000; at Fontenoy, 100,000; at Yarmouth, 150,000; at Chalon, 300,000 of Attila's army alone. The Moors, about the year 730, lost in one battle near Poitiers, 70,000; in another, four centuries later, 180,000, besides 50,000 prisoners, and in a third even 200,000. From 12,000 to 20,000 in killed and wounded form the average in the greatest battle of the late Civil war. The losses in the chief battles of the Franco-German war were somewhat greater.

The Woman's Relief Corps

Woman's Relief Corps. They are the loyal women with loving thoughts and words who cheered the patriotic men to the defense of their country, while the soldiers were sacrificing health, home and happiness from 1861 to 1865. The women inspired their sons, lovers and husbands when fighting the battles, and with unwearied hands prepared useful and necessary articles for field and hospital use. They gathered around the fireside and thought of the dangers—not only in war's destruction of killed and wounded, but hardships of marching and exposure and the uncertainty of the safe return of the absent ones. "Woman's Relief Corps!" God bless them; their sufferings were not less real and bitter than the men defending the old flag. The same spirit of constancy that characterized the women during those dark days, now manifests itself in the care for the soldiers' widows and orphans, and appreciative of your share in the sorrows of war, congratulates you in being partakers of the joys of peace.

The Woman's Relief Corps

Auxiliary to the Grand Army of the Republic

OBJECTS:—To cultivate the spirit of patriotism among the living, and cherish the memory of those who died to preserve the Republic; to assist Union veterans and their dependent ones in distress, and to procure for them and for needy army nurses homes and employment. Eligibility to membership consists in good moral character, patriotism in the past, assurance of patriotism for the future, and the attainment of the age of sixteen years.

Northern Wisconsin is the Country

THE ARPIN HARDWOOD LUMBER COMPANY, of Atlanta, Wisconsin, are opening up their fine tract of 90,000 acres of hardwood lands to settlers. This land is located in and contains some of the finest hardwood tracts to be found in the state today. On account of heavy logging and lumbering operations along the Soo Line there is a good local market for produce of all kinds. There is also a good market for cord wood. Atlanta is on the Chippewa Valley and Northern Railway, 1½ miles north of Bruce, Gates County, Wisconsin. The surface is slightly rolling, with an abundance of springs and streams, and well adapted to farming and dairying. Located along the Wisconsin Central, C., St. P., M. & O., and Soo Line railroads, and close to towns and settlements.

A rare opportunity is offered to settlers of limited means who can only pay for part of their lands, as unexcelled chances for working at the large saw-mills at Atlanta and on their railroad, which is being constructed, are offered by the company. A large force of men is employed the whole year, but in the winter, when a farmer's time is least valuable to him on the farm, the company employs the largest force of men, and wages are the highest, and settlers are always given the preference.

This land will be sold on easy terms at $6.00 per acre and up. If you are interested, write for particulars and printed matter, and your letters will receive prompt attention.

Jan. 1, 1861, the army of the United States for active service consisted of 14,663 men. May 1, 1865, there were 797,807 men on active duty, while 202,709 more were absent. During the struggle there were 44,000 killed in battle, 186,000 died from disease, 26,000 died in rebel prisons, 49,000 died from wounds, 280,000 were wounded and 185,000 are recorded captured and missing.
